FITH other members of the "Secret Service" company, Mr. Gillette arrived from London yesterday morning on the Paris. Mr. Gillette bore no resemblance to a well man. His attack of Hiness in London had told upon him severely. But he professes to feel a thousand times better on American soil, and promises to be on hand in his old part at the revival of "Secret Service" at the Empire. He went to the country last night for a rest.

"Our reception was more than cordial," said Mr. Gillette, speaking of the London appearance of the company in his play, "On the first night the audience warmed up slowly, but in the second act we felt that we were carrying them, and we had ample proof of it when the curtain went down. It was plain sailing after that. At the close of the performance they stood on the sects and cheered. London audiences are more demonstrative that the audiences we meet in America. "I don't know just what was the matter with me. The doctors said I was the victim of a disease with a title as long as my arm, but it is my private opinion that it was a case of not taking sufficient care of myself for the work I was doing. I am feeling much better now, and will be all right after a few days in the country."

Mr. Gillette said he did not see the Queen's Jubilee procession nor any of the attendant ecremonies. He refused to be dragged into a discussion of the cable dispatches announcing that the excellent English company selected to succeed the American actors in the London ran of "Secret Sorvice" had made a practical fall-tire, but he smiled significantly as he branched the conversation to the threadbare field of ocean weather and English cigars.
